Chief Justice speaks to regional Bar meetings in E. Panhandle For immediate release Friday, October 23, 2009

CHARLESTON, W.Va.. – Supreme Court Chief Justice Brent D. Benjamin plans to speak to regional meetings of the West Virginia State Bar in Martinsburg and Moorefield next week.

The regional meetings are held annually throughout the state, and the Chief Justice is attending as many as his schedule will accommodate. The meetings begin at 10:30 a.m., include a lunch, and usually end by 1:30 p.m.

Chief Justice Benjamin will attend a meeting in Martinsburg on Monday, October 26, and in Moorefield on Tuesday, October 27. Last week he attended meetings in Logan, Charleston, and Beckley.

In each location, he tailors his speech to the local Bar and timely matters important to the West Virginia judicial system.

The meetings provide a total of three continuing legal credit hours in legal ethics, office management, substance abuse, and/or the elimination of bias.
